

The Japan-Australia Business Co-operation Committee

Background to establishment

In March 1961, the Tokyo Chamber of Commerce and Industry (TCCI) sent a trade goodwill mission to Australia, led by TCCI Vice Chairman Mr Shigeo Nagano, who was also the president of Fuji Steel Corporation. During their visit to Canberra, Mr Nagano proposed the establishment of a business co-operation committee with the aim of contributing to the development of Japan-Australia economic relations by promoting mutual understanding and cooperation between the two countries' business communities.

In response to this proposal, the Japan-Australia Business Co-operation Committee (JABCC) was established in February 1963 on the Japanese side under the leadership of the Japan Chamber of Commerce and Industry (JCCI), Keidanren (the Japan Business Federation), the Japan Foreign Trade Council (JFTC), and the Japan External Trade Organization (JETRO). Meanwhile, on the Australian side, the Australia-Japan Business Co-operation Committee (AJBCC) was established in August 1962 by the Associated Chamber of Manufactures of Australia (ACMA) and the Associated Chamber of Commerce of Australia (ACCA). In May 1963, the first Japan-Australia Joint Business Conference was held in Tokyo.

Japan-Australia Joint Business Conference

The conference brings together the top business leaders and government officials from both countries to discuss a wide range of topics focused on trade and investment that are fitted to the times, and to make recommendations to the governments of both countries as necessary. The conference is held alternately every year in the two countries.

The conference has made requests to the governments to improve issues related to the business environment, and has achieved significant results. Examples include actions on sugar issues and iron ore issues, the opening of the Perth Consulate-General, the implementation of the Australia-Japan EPA/TPP, and improvement of work visa requirements in Australia.

The 59th Japan-Australia Joint Business Committee was held in Tokyo. This was the first face-to-face meeting of the Committee in three years. (The committee consists of 18 Executive members, one Chairman, one Vice Chairman, 14 Committee members, and two Advisors.)

JABCC Committee on the Promotion of EPA Utilization

Further to the Japanese and Australian Government's joint establishment of the "Sub-committee on Promotion of a Closer Economic Relationship," the JAEPA Implementation Sub-committee
